2010 Summer Camp

"I have been a teacher of English language and literature at both the college and high school levels for 18 years, beginning my career at the Univ. of Cal. Santa Barbara and teaching more recently at Piedmont High School. I can offer students an opportunity to strengthen both their reading and writing skills. I will give students a chance to read age-appropriate stories, poems, and essays and will help them develop their responses to their reading with focused writing and discussions. Students will also have the chance to develop their writing skills and will be asked to write in a variety of forms, both creative and essay/analytical. I will employ games and activities to make learning both fun and challenging. I want students to both enhance their skills as readers and writers and begin to enjoy their expressive and imaginative powers."

- Jeffrey Segall, Ph.D.

B.A. in English literature, University of Michigan
 M.A.T. in English literature, Univ. of Chicago
 Ph.D. in English literature, State Univ. of NY at Buffalo

"I grew up in the Bay Area in Walnut Creek, California. After graduating from Northgate High School in 2004, I went on to CSU Monterey Bay as a Liberal Studies major with dreams of one day teaching first grade. During the end of my third year, I fell in love with math decided this was the subject I wanted to teach. I added a fifth year and a second major in math with an emphasis in secondary education. After graduating with a BA in Liberal Studies and a BS in Mathematics this past May, I started a two year Masters and Credential program at UC Berkeley. In May 2011 I will graduate from Berkeley with a single subject credential in Mathematics and a Masters in Mathematics education. I am excited to meet everyone and to learn together this Summer!"
